“A Bill to Reform Intercom’s Structure”

Whereas: Intercom is a concentrated group of student leaders from diverse areas of campus that collectively represent a multitude of student perspectives which come together, in a think-tank like format, to fulfill the primary functions of:

i. Serving as guides and role models in times of emergency or crisis to the entire Student Body, and

ii. Disseminating information from the administration directly to the umbrella of respective organizations each member represents during such times of emergency or crisis, and

11

iii. Finding and developing issues that are the most pressing concerns of the Student Body which are to be presented to the Board of Trustees’ Student Relations Committee, and

12

14

Whereas: As a distinctly collaborative body Intercom hosts all of its meetings in an open-dialogue format in which each student leader has equal right to speak from the perspective of their constituents, and

15

17

Whereas: The meetings are primarily self-guided by the group as a whole as well as by the Faculty Advisors, and

18

Whereas: This think-tank, in order to function at its greatest level of accuracy in discussing the issues that affect the Student Body to the Board of Trustees, must maintain an accurate representation of the diverse and predominate perspectives on campus whether they be Greek Life, Honors College, Inclusiveness and Intercultural Services, or others, and

20

22

24

Whereas: The President of the Student Body has served historically in a largely ceremonial role as Chair of Intercom, and

25

Whereas: Each member of Intercom, including the President, has historically held equal amount of input and power in determining what groups of students should and should not be represented on Intercom collectively, and

27

29

Whereas: In the past two semesters, during which time both the primary advisor for Intercom, the Vice-Chancellor of Student Affairs, and the Student Body President have experienced simultaneous changes in staffing, the

32 ceremonial role of Chair has been misinterpreted as a role in which the 33 Student Body President has sole authority on deciding which perspectives
34 of the Student Body should, and should not be represented on Intercom, 35 and

36 Whereas: When the power to determine what groups perspectives do and do not 37 have the right to be a part of Intercom, and by extension the Board of 38 Trustees, is concentrated in a single individual, that places every group on 39 campus in danger of their perspective being taken away by the particular 40 preferences of said individual, and

41 Whereas: The exercise of this sole authority has led to unrest upon campus both 42 broadly and amongst groups lacking equal representation, leading to 43 feelings of division and inequality within the TCU Community that 44 weakens said community, and

45 Whereas: The concentration of power in a single position is counter to the ideals of 46 dialogue and collaborative decision making upon which the group was 47 founded, and

48 Whereas: The group, comprising the most seasoned student leaders on campus as 49 well as their faculty advisors, is fully capable of conducting a succinct and 50 efficient meeting without the ceremonial role of the Chair, and

51 Whereas: The Student Body President serves an extremely important and vital role
52 in representing the Student Body and should retain every right to represent 53 that perspective in Intercom and to the Board of Trustees. However, the 54 President, being an individual, should not retain the power of sole 55 authority over what groups should be represented within Intercom and 56 which should not, and

57 Whereas: Based upon Intercoms primary functions previously laid out, the group has 58 historically utilized a de facto collaborative approach to problem solving
59 to ensure all members of Intercom make decisions together, that all
60 perspectives are given equal weight, and that the group functions as a 61 cohesive whole composed from many diverse parts, therefore
